Barium's Chief Worrier

MR. HARRY E. BARKLEY

This is a picture of Mr. Harry Barkley. In addititon to being the principal of the grammar grades he is the coach of both boys and girls in basketball. There are times during the year when he looks terribly imposed upon, and then you occasionally catch the expression which is on his face in this picture. This is the way he looked in the last moment of the Barium-Kannapolis game. Here's how come: the Barium teams had been going through a hectic two weeks. They had been having trouble with teams that were 'way below them in the standings - the girls had barely won from Lexington. They had lost to the Children's Home by a scant three-point margin. They had tied Statesville after being in the lead with less than 15 seconds to go. His boys come from behind in one game to win by one point, in another game by two points, and then finally to lose to Statesville by two points after leading Statesville. So when we went to play Kannapolis on their court, Kannapolis being 'way out in front, the only undefeated and un-scared team of the conference, most of us really just expected to hold the score down to something respectable. Well, our boys took the lead at the beginning of the game and never relinquished it - it ran from two points to six points, and the game ended with four points. The above expression on Mr. Barkley's face was caught just as Earl Adams scored an amazing shot in the last thirty seconds to really sew up the game. It appears that friend Barkley is beginning to realize that the world is a fairly decent place to live in after all - this dawning realization can be observed in his expression - maybe mixed with it is the thought that Barium still has a chance to come out on top in the conference, although a mighty slim chance.

News From Some of the Cottages

RUMPLE HALL

Hello Friends,

Here are the dish washers again bringing you our news. We have so much news we don't know where to begin.

We have two new matrons now. Mrs. Wood from Greenville, S. C., is our dining room matron. Our upstairs matron is Eleanor Pope. We like them both very much.

We can hardly wait untill our new preacher arrives.

We went to the show Saturday and sure had a grand time. A man by the name of Robert Stowe is very good in supplying us with candy, and is also a good friend of ours.

The weather is warm and sunny and we enjoy playing basketball out of doors.

We have two girls sick in the infirmary, we hope they will soon be back with us.

We had better close and say so long for this month, we will be thinking about you all.

So long friends,

—Peggy Plyler
Hazel Creech
Juanita Young.

ANNIE LOUISE

Hello Folks,

Here we are again bringing you the latest news from our cottage. We have scraped around in our cottage to get some news but I think we have just about run out.

We have quite a few girls in the Infirmary and it certainly seems lonesome without them. Hurry up girls.

February 20th is the birthday of one of our teachers who lives in this cottage and we would like to say Happy Birthday, Miss Blakeney and everyone else who has a birthday in February. Some of her friends sent her a big cake in the shape of a drum and we had a party. Boy I wish birthdays came more often. We played games and then we had lemonade and cake.

The tournament begins today and we here at Barium always

Winter Sports

The basketball season is little more than half over and the Barium teams have acquitted themselves well. There have been some hair-raising one-point victories, and just the same sort of defeats.

In the warm-ups before the conference season started we lost a couple of games to Union Grove. Union Grove was the Mid-Piedmont champion of 1945 in the girls' division, and most of their team is back this year. It was Barium's first game and we lost both of them. Then our B teams went to Troutman just for a warm-up for their varsity teams that are beginning to function again. Barium won both of those games. Against China Grove our girls won, our boys lost. Then with Scotts that one-point business started. Our girls won 30-29; our boys more than doubled the score.

Then the conference games started. Our first game was with Concord. The Concord girls were co-champions for 1945; our girls defeated them 35-26, and our boys took them over for 33-21. Then Lexington visited us. We did not expect to find a very strong girl's team but we had a good deal of difficulty in beating them — the score was 31-28; the boys' game was 43-26 in our favor. Then we

SCHOOL NOTES

The Stronghold Bible Class of Caldwell Memorial Presbyterian Church of Charlotte recently sponsored an essay contest in our school. The subject used was, "Why I Should Put God First in My Life." Eight high school students participated in the contest. An age limit caused those taking part to come largely from the ninth and tenth grades. First prize, a twenty five dollar bond, went to Bradley Jean Manus of the tenth grade. Second prize, a beautiful picture of Christ was received by Mary Dickson Arrowood of the ninth grade. The others who wrote essays were Charles Barrett, Ernestine Baldwin, Dorothy Shepherd, Peggy Coffey, Betty Coffey, and Virginia Presnell. Each of these participants recieved a small picture of Christ.

Friday, February 8th, the High School Glee Club gave a program at Mitchell College at their Chapel Hour. Three numbers were sung by the entire Glee Club, and one by a double quartet. There are thirty-one members of the Glee Club. Mrs. J. P. Johnston, the director, is planning to have our school take part in the State Music Contest in April.

A few weeks ago the school acquired a very valuable piece of equipment: a 16 MM sound, movie projector. Three or four educational pictures are shown each week.

Several of the teachers have been on the sick list during recent weeks. One teacher was lost by marriage just before Christmas, Miss Frances Hildebrand of Troutman. Fortunately, we were able to secure Mr. R. E. Sigman to take her place.

This school was not affected by the bad weather, and bad roads; so the seven members of the senior class expect to recieve their diplomas on schedule, Monday May 13th.

THE GLORY OF THE COMMONPLACE

II Cor. 4:7—We have this treasure in earthen vessels.

Dr. J. R. Miller tells us that a number of years ago some Americans were in Cairo for a journey across the desert. They went out to buy some vessels to carry their supply of water for the journey. And they bought in accordance with their pleasure. Some bought brass vessels beautifully engraved, others bought porcelain delicately ornamented, others bought plain earthen ware vessels. The brass vessels heated and the water became tainted, the porcelain cracked and the water was lost; so the old earthen ware vessel was found to be the most useful as it preserved the water and kept it cool. Therefore, in its usefulness, the earthen vessel shone more brightly than brass and was more beautiful than porcelain for the treasure was safe in the earthen vessel.

The life, death, and teachings of Jesus have been eloquent of the beauties and glories of the earthen vessel.

We are near to Lincoln's birthday and much will be said of the home-spun hero of the little log cabin home, of the splitting of rails, etc. But think of how Christ changed a stable into a shrine and made of a manger a cradle venerated throughout time. It may be that on the night that Christ was born, Caesar Augustus had a great reception in Rome. There, as they reclined about sumptuous repasts with vessels of gold and silver and the rich viands from all over the world, suppose someone had the gift of prophecy to say, "Tonight your imperial highness, there is born in a stable in the province of Judea of peasant blood, One Who shall establish the greatest kingdom ever known, Who will be known and loved when you are forgotten and even the time of your illustrious reign will be dated from his birth." How that would have amused Caesar. But the stable at Bethlehem today is the object of teeming millions of pilgrims to who Augustus Caesar is unknown and his palace forgotten.

The same might be said of the little town of Nazareth which was a by-word in those days, "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?" But now we sing in our hymns of Nazareth and Bethlehem glorified by the presence of Christ.

I suppose if Jesus had seen fit, He could have selected as His birth-place the finest palace in Jerusalem. I suppose He could have gone to the greatest universities and schools in the world, but He chose for His college, a carpenter's shop. And I think He did that because He knew that some day He would stand and say, "Come unto me all ye that labor," and He did not want anyone to say, "What does He know about me, or the way I have to live, or the work I have to do." Jesus took homes and scenes more humble, more crude, more austere, and more uncomfortable than we can know or imagine and made a halo of glory to shine about them.

I suppose He could have selected as His friends and familiars on earth the most prominent people, the richest families in the land, but He chose the fisher folk of the Sea of Galilee, and I think He did that because when He says, "I have called you friends," He does not want anyone to feel that Jesus was above them. The church is made up of all sorts of folks and I know of no church that does not extend it's heartiest welcome to everybody of whatever station. But there are those who rightly or wrongly feel that the Church feels above them. They can never lay that charge against Christ or a true follower of His. Herod was doubtless riding in a pleasure boat of silken sails all aflutter with flags and pennants. The Emperor Tiberias doubless sailed about the Mediteranean with trireme driven by scores of galley slaves. But Jesus elected to go about in the boats of fishermen odorous with the smell of fish. And the friendships he formed and cemented there were the beginning of life time ocmpanionships. His thorough fellowship on the Galilian Lake lead His friends into a higher service, "Fishers of Men." Yes, the presence of Jesus with the fishermen of Galilee have surrounded that Lake with a halo of glory.

Jesus found treasures in earthen vessels in His teachings. Doubtless Jesus loved the mountains, He spent a great deal of time there. I am sure he observed sunsets. He may have stood on some rocky promontory and watched the waves roll in from the Mediteranean Sea. But you find in Christ's teaching no high flown rhapsodies on these marvelous works of nature. His hearers might not have had imagination enough to follow that. But when he picked up a little dead bird and said, "Are not two sparrows sold for a cent, but this one did not fall to the ground without my Father", they understood that. Or a bit of an earthen ware lamp placed on something to give light, or the sower sowing seed; or the shepherd seeking a lost sheep. The world has the profound thoughts of Socrates and Plato and Aristotle and is the richer for them. But who can estimate what it has meant to have a Savior who has surrounded in His teaching the ordinary things of life with a halo of glory.

Jesus in His parables spoke of many classes of men, kings, lords, princess, judges, farmers, tax gatherers, fishermen, merchantmen, but I want you to especially observe His glorifying the profession of the shepherd. Our conception of the shepherd of Palestine is high and noble. It was not so regarded as a whole in Palestine. It did not require any degree of education, intellegence, or industry to be a shepherd. It was a lazy man's job and shepherds generally were not held in such high esteem. But Jesus seizing upon the heroic elements, the romatic features of a rather unheroic and unromatic occupation and drawing from them beautiful lessons has made for us compelling figure, has given to the shepherds of today a standard toward which to aspire and has surrounded the shepherd and his flock with a halo of glory.

The same may be said of childhood. We speak now of them, "Trailing clouds of glory, From God Who is their Home." They were not so considered before Christ. And no one else ever spoke of children as He did. They might want the children to be saints, but they never commanded the saints to be children. None other so tenderly took them up with words of kindness and blessed them. The encircling arms of Christ has ever surrounded childhood with a halo of glory.

I wish you to notice to the monument by which He wishes to be remembered. When Mausolus, King of Carea, prepared for death, he prepared a vault upon a base 250 feet high, on which stood a chamber surrounded by an inoic colonade of 36 columns, and upon this was a pyramid of 24 steps. Upon the truncated apex of this pryamid was a marble four horse chariot and in the chariot colossal statues of Mausolus and his wife, Artimisia. When cheaps wanted to build a monument, he got great blocks of stone averaging 40 cubic feet and drew them from the hills across the Nile and built an edifice covering 13 acres; containing 3,057,000 cubic yards; a weight of no less than 6,848,000 tons; rising to a height of 482 feet. But when the King of Kings was erecting His Memorial, He took the earthen vessel containing some unleaven bread and he took weakened sour wine and He blessed and broke it and gave it and said, "This do in remembrance of me." The Mausoleum of Hilicarnassus has long since fallen into ruins, and while the Pyramids still stand in solitary grandeur, they have little place in the thoughts of the world; but memories, the sweetest and tenderest today surrounds the Savior, His eleven followers, and the simple repast, with the shekinah glory.

The gallows has strangled the breath of many a noble spirit; the guilloteen has let the life blood from many a noble heart, but neither one of them is reverenced today.

Crucifixion was the most shameful of deaths. The old song is true— "On a hill far away stood an old rugged Cross, the emblem of suffering and shame." The Romans reserved crucifixion for the punishment of the foulest criminals of the foreigners. No Roman was crucified. But Jesus dies on the Cross and now the Cross is transformed. Well has Alfred Noyes written: "Whence came this prentice Carpenter, Whose voice hath shaken kingdoms down, whose menial gibbit rises triumphant o'r the wreck of empires and stretches out its arms amongst the Stars."

The Cross reconciled God and man. The Cross saves from sin. "So we love that old Cross for the dearest and best, for a world of lost sinners was slain."

No doubt in this day of careless thought, the Cross is often carelessly sacrelegeously used to ornament an arch or to enhance decoletee beauty, but to those who believe it is the power of God, so that Christians of every tongue sing: "In the Cross of Christ I glory, Towering o'r the wrecks of time, All the light of sacred story, Gathers round his head sublime."

Paul tells us in another place that there are all sorts of vessels, some of honor and some of dishonor, but we have this treasure in earthen vessels, the power of God. Jesus said, "The glory that thou hast given me, I've given them." What poor specimens of humanity we find in a world without Christ, but how Christ can transform them by His presence even as He transformed the son of Thunder, and Simon called Peter, and Thomas, the Doubter.

How Bigbee has shown us in his "Twice Born Men", old Born Drunk and the rest of them, Jerry McAuley, Billy Sunday, Tim Ranney, Tom Farmer, and scores of others transformed by the renewing of their mind.

We wonder at the sunset glories and we wonder the more when we learn that those colors are not reflected by air, for air is perfectly transparent. They are reflected by minute particles of dust; dust glorified by light reflected. I wonder if that is not the picture of a Christian and I wonder if there would be as much glory of Christ on earth if there was no Christians, earthy though they be, to reflect Him.

We all with unveiled face beholding as in a mirror the glory of the Lord are transformed into the same image from glory to glory even as from the Lord, the Spirit."

made a trip over to the Children's Home at Winston-Salem. Our girls lost their first conference game 35-23; our boys won 24-22 — a two point margin. We then went to Concord where we had it rather easy, defeating their girls 21-16, and their boys 24-15. Then we went to Monroe where our girls won 50-22; our boys won 40-34 but Monroe was leading in the last quarter. Then at Mooresville our girls won 35-18, but our boys tied up at the end of the regular game and oame through with three points to win in the extra period 36-33. Mooresville led during most of the fourth quarter.

Then to Lexington — our girls barely won 22-20; our boys won in the last fifteen seconds 32-31, with Lexington leading all of the fourth quarter but the last fifteen seconds.

Then the Children's Home again they defeated our girls 21-18, although we led for a brief moment before the end of the game. Our boys lost 35-20. And then Statesville, and when the final whistle blew our girls had tied Statesville 25-25 and our boys lost 25-23.

The junior teams at this writing, have only had one game each, our ninth grade girls losing to Statesville 15-10; the 125lb. boys losing to Statesville 29-7.

Here is what we have yet to play: Kannapolis, their boys' team is ledaing the conference so far undefeated; then a game with Union Grove, not a conference game; then with Mornroe, Mooresville, and return games with Kannapolis and Statesville, and then the tournament. We will probably enter the Landis tournament and the Salisbury tournament. Our junior teams will enter the tournament at Barium about the middle of March. When that's all over there will be some tired referee's whistles or tired ears fom hearing those whistles, and maybe some tired basketballs, the players won't seem tired a bit.

FOUL-WEATHER FRIENDS

Tim Burton had no faith in human nature. He formulated the idea at an early age that a man had to fight for everything he got, and that the other fellow was not to be considered—unless one could afford to do so. But Tim learned also that society was dependent on itself for its existence. He therefore determined to like people, despite his disbelief in them.

Tim developed a pleasing personality. People liked him because he pretended to like them. He was ambitious and successful. Before he reached the age of twenty-one he had overcome the handicap of poverty-stricken parents. At twenty-five, Tim Burton was near a millionaire. Before he was thirty, he had doubled his first million. Then he quit; he reasoned he had enough money. Now he determined to spend it in a manner to suit himself. His habit of liking people caused him to enter upon some unique experiments. He decided to search out young people who were trying to get a foothold in their chosen professions, and give them a boost.

He found young doctors, lawyers, writers, singers, engineers, and actors, young businessmen and bewildered youths. He traveled the length and breadth of the country, and whenever he located someone who was working hard and not getting ahead, he would present a sizeable voucher, consistently refusing collateral.

Tim acquired a reputation. He became known as "Liberal Tim." People flocked to him, and he never turned a deaf ear to an honest request. He had no illusions. He did not decieve himself into believing that if something happened to him, and he needed help, these selfsame people would rush and fight to pay the debt. He did not believe that things worked out that way in the scheme of life. People would fight to get, but not to give. That was natural human instinct. The friends he had made were fair-weather friends—and that was all right with him. Some men bought ocean cruisers, or fine houses, or furs and jewels. He chose to buy the vision of hope in the eyes of a despairing young singer. There was no difference, as he saw it.

Tim Burton's reputation spread far and wide. His friends began to wonder if there was no end to his wealth. Tim did not worry about this; he was too shrewd, he figured, to lose all his money. But something did happen. A bank failed. An oil well ran dry. A prospecting expedition failed. One day Tim Burton found hifself a bankrupt. He grinned, and disappeared. He wanted to spare his friends the pain of refusing to return the favor. He thought they would want to forget what he had done, and would avoid him.

For two years Tim roamed the world under an assumed name, trying to recoup his fortune. One day in New York he came face to face with Frank Stone, an old friend. He pretended not to know Stone, and endeavored to pass, but Stone exclaimed, "For the life of me—Tim Burton!"

Tim was caught. He merely said, "Hello, Frank."

"I am in a terrible rush, Tim," continued Stone; "where are you living?"

"Oh, at the Wise Bard quarters," answered Tim, and regretted the answer the next moment. Stone shook his hand vigorously and disappeared. "Well," said Tim under his breath, "it's what I asked for, and I can take it."

Four nights later five men called at the Wise Bard to see "Tim Burton." They were informed there was no such man registered. But after a minute description of the man sought, the host produced "John Sampson."

"Tim," exclaimed the men, "we know you; you will have to come with us."

Tim endeavored to withdraw, but the spokesman took his arm gently, and he walked away with them. Fearing that he might be suspected as a fugitive, he asked the men to explain, but they pushed him into a waiting cab.

In a few minutes the cab stopped in front of a great building. There were crowds of people in front, cheering and shouting. Tim thought he could hear his name called. The men rushed him through the crowd into a great room in the building. The room was filled with people—thousands of them, it seemed to Tim. The men led him to the rostrum, and gave him a seat. Confused and bewildered, he endeavored to speak to the men, but the cheers drowned his words.

One of the five men stood up to speak. Tim now saw it was Frank Stone. He talked glowingly of some man's honor. Tim was too excited to comprehend the meaning of what was happening. Finally Stone stepped up to Tim, and said affectionately, "Folks, here's the fellow I mean "

Two men lifted Tim to his feet. The cheering was tumultuous. Tim began to see a new light in human nature. He looked at the audience and recognized many of the old faces—the faces of those he had assisted with his money. Someone was elbowing his way to the front. Then he thrust a slip of paper into Tim's hand. A tiny note was attached, which read: "Just a little token of appreciation from the folks you befriended." The slip was a voucher for a large sum of money.

"Frank—" Tim turned to his old friend, "Frank, tell these foul-weather friends of mine—" But the tumult of cheers made further speech impossible. Tim's eyes were drenched, and in his throat was a something that would not down. Richard Hill Wilkinson.

RULES FOR GRAMMAR

Three little words you often see are articles a, an, and the.

A noun's the name of anything, as school, or garden, hoop or swing.

Adjectives tell the kind of noun, as great, small, pretty, white, or brown.

Instead of nouns, the pronouns stand: her head, his face, your arms, my hand.

Verbs tell of something to be done: to read, count, sing, laugh, jump, or run.

How things are done, the adverbs tell, as slowly, quickly, ill, or well.

Conjunctions join the words together, as men and women, wind or weather.

The preposition stands before a noun, as in or through a door.

The interjection shows surprise, as O! how pretty; O! how wise.

The whole are called nine parts of speech, which reading, writing, speaking teach.

LEE'S COTTAGE

Hello Folks,

We are looking forward to spring time so we can play outside.

We have our radio fixed and we enjoy listening to the "Lone Ranger" and "Blondie".

We are going to have a new Pastor the first of March. His name is Br. Benton. We hope he will be happy with us.

We have been flying kites, we are all going to get one in March.

We have been having some good basketball games. We play Kannapolis tonight and we hope to win.

The fifth grade teacher, Miss Burroughs, has been sick and Mrs. Barkley is our teacher.

We are playing baseball now and we have lots of fun.

This is all this time, will be back next month.
